

ABSTRACT

The invention relates to a method for manufacturing a USB electronic key, whereby a chip is cut out of a tape, provided with a plurality of chips, each chip defining contact pads in USB format and supporting an electronic component, connected to the pads. A thickness adjustment step is directly carried out on the chip to give a thickness conforming to the USB standard, at least in the area of the contact pads.